Margot Bezzi

With an academic background in Communication Science and Media Studies, she looks at technologies and at the digital revolution with a sociological and humanities perspective. Since 2009 she works on EU research and innovation (R&I) policies and funding programmes, with a focus on societal and organizational transformations triggered by the digital transition and the Internet. In APRE as of 2014, she works on the dialogue between science and society, including the transition towards open and participative R&I models, Responsible Research and Innovation, multidisciplinary research methods, new forms of innovation (e.g. social innovation).