

The role of sustainability assessment in the technological innovation

Sustainability assessment plays a key role in steering the technological innovation towards the development of economically marketable technologies with positive environmental and social impacts. In this presentation the fundamentals of sustainability assessment are presented and the reasons why they are considered so important that sustainability assessment is now included in all research projects, from lab scale to demo plants, are discussed. Finally, some recommendations on how to properly include the sustainability assessment in research projects are provided.