

Eleonora Cianflone is Assistant Professor of Applied Medical Biotechnology at the Department of Medical and Surgical Sciences of the University Magna Graecia of Catanzaro (UMG). She obtained her Master degree in Cellular and Molecular Biology at the University of Rome Tor Vergata in 2013 and in 2014 she joined the UMG as a M.Phil. Student in “Stem Cell Biology and Regenerative Medicine”. In 2015 she was enrolled as a Ph.D. student at UMG in the Ph.D. School of Biomarkers of Chronic and Complex Diseases. In 2018 she joined the Laboratory of Physiology and Cellular Biophysics directed by Doctor Marks at Columbia University, NY, and the Laboratory of Physiology directed by Doctor Rota at New York Medical College, NY. In March 2019 she obtained the PhD degree.