

Paolo Grianti was born close to Milano in 1982.

He was graduated with laude in 2006 in Biotechnology for Industry and Environmental at the University of Milano and later in 2009 received his Ph.D. in Genetics and Biomolecular Sciences at the University of Milano working on cell cycle progression and related checkpoints using Saccharomyces Cerevisiae as model organism and applying many different techniques of molecular biology as well as light microscopy.

After a period at the CRBM-CNRS Montpellier in France he came back to University of Milano as a post-doc.

In 2012 Paolo move as sales engineer to JEOL (ITALIA) S.p.A., a subsidiary of the japanese company JEOL LTD, a world wide leading company producing cutting edge scientific instruments.

From 2019 he is General Manager Sales Operation of JEOL (ITALIA) S.p.A.